

Getting Freaky

on the Wiki.

Why uses the Wiki?

- Sometimes the Constitution shouldn't talk about implementation. The Wiki is, in my opinion, all about implementation.
- Some stories shouldn't be available to public, but should be available to CSers. Keeping tabs on history provides context.
- Statistics are pretty cool, and besides the Wiki, there isn't anywhere to amass all of that Data.

Who reads the Wiki?

- Anyone who needs documentation for an old as fuck project.
- Anyone with a history question.
- Anyone on E-Board who wants to run their position with the knowledge of directors before them.
- Anyone who wants to learn about CSH culture.
- Anyone... Yeah!

Why edit the Wiki?

- You like helping CSH.
- You learn by removing/fixing/changing depreciated articles and replacing it with newer articles that apply to things going on today.
 - You'll begin to notice cycles that other people may not.
- You want the future of CSH to be based on the newest information possible.
 - People will be reading the Wiki 3 years from now. You can be a part of what they are reading.

So uh... How do I do this?

- ==Projects== will make a header, ===Foo=== will make a subheader
- [[page]] -> wiki.csh.rit.edu/wiki/page
 - [[page | This Page Here]] -> wiki.csh.rit.edu/wiki/page
- ^^bmbowdish^^ -> wiki.csh.rit.edu/wiki/User:bowdish
 - [[User:bmbowdish|Braden Bowdish]]

Now Let's go And Do It!

- We're now going to go and look at the wiki and see how things actually look!
- Any Questions?
